COMMON QUESTIONS AND HONEST ANSWERS

You're upgrading your life with a move to a refined senior community. This will help make your day-to-day life easier and more enjoyable, but your family might have some questions about the change. This guide will help you understand why they have these concerns, and give you some possible answers to consider.

Why are you moving?

This is a big change, so your family will want to know if this will be a good move for you. What they might not realize is that this change means freedom from never-ending household upkeep, like maintenance and lawn care. It's your chance to start a new adventure, meet new friends, and spend your time doing the things you love.

Why this particular community?

Your family wants to make sure you choose a place where you will be comfortable. They can rest assured that at Revel, you'll be surrounded by vibrant, active people. Your apartment home will have everything you need with open floor plans and modern kitchens, and you'll have access to great amenities and fun activities. With Ovation, a modern American restaurant, and The Social Club, a spirited pub, every meal will be special with abundant choices and seasonal flavors.

Is this a wise financial decision?

Your family wants you to spend money wisely, and they may wonder if you're moving to a place that's worth the investment. You can explain that Revel is priced comparably to other independent living communities. Rent includes daily meals, utilities, housekeeping, and access to a variety of amenities and social events.

What happens to the house?

A home is often a primary source of financial stability, and if your children grew up in this house, they might be sad to see it go. Explain to your family that the way you want to spend the best years of your life—full of travel and new experiences—doesn't fit with living in a traditional house anymore.

What will happen to your belongings?

Your family might express concern about furniture, keepsakes, and other possessions. These items can be emotionally meaningful for your family, and they probably want to make sure you aren't tossing their favorite memories. Now may be the time to pass along cherished items to your loved ones. Think about the lifestyle you want, and whether all of your current belongings fit with your future.

What about your pets?

Of course your family wants your best friends to come with you. Revel is designed with your happiness in mind, so dogs and cats are welcome!

Keep the conversation going—invite your family to visit Revel so they can see it for themselves.
